
Abstract
Patients on hemodialysis are hospitalized often and are vulnerable to deterioration of health during and after hospitalization. Lack of care coordination between hospital and outpatient dialysis facilities is a contributing factor. Proactive interventions to improve care coordination and the critical role nurses can play before, during, and after hospitalization are discussed.